The Arts of the Present
October 26–28, 2017

HOSTED BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, BERKELEY
AT THE OAKLAND MARRIOTT CITY CENTER

Sponsored by
The Department of English, University of California, Berkeley; the Arts + Design Initiative at UC Berkeley; the Division of Arts and Humanities, University of California, Berkeley; the Arts Research Center, University of California, Berkeley; and the Townsend Center for the Humanities, University of California, Berkeley.

With additional support from
The Department of English, Pomona College; the Association for the Study of the Arts of the Present; ASAP/Journal; the Center for British Studies, University of California, Berkeley; the Center for New Media, University of California, Berkeley; the Institute of European Studies, University of California, Berkeley; the Holloway Series in Poetry, University of California, Berkeley; and the Departments of Art Practice, East Asian Languages and Culture, Film and Media, and Music at the University of California, Berkeley.
Welcome to ASAP/9: The Arts of the Present, the ninth annual meeting of the Association for the Study of the Arts of the Present.

We are delighted to be hosting you for this year’s conference in Oakland and Berkeley. We hope that your time in the East Bay allows you to visit some of the many institutions—large and small—where the contemporary arts are doing their work. We are especially happy that the conference’s keynote events will take us to the recently reopened Berkeley Art Museum and Pacific Film Archive and the Oakland Museum of California. But there are countless other sites in the Bay Area where questions that this conference explores are being asked in different terms and media: What roles can we imagine for the arts in relation to forms of social action and political resistance now? What can artists and scholars do to sustain and support their work in the face of new restrictions on intellectual inquiry, expression, and movement? What conditions of risk and precarity inform artistic practice, reception, and community?

The breadth and richness of ASAP/9 embraces a truly inspiring diversity of approaches to the arts of the present. This is our largest conference ever, and reflects a growing sense of ASAP’s centrality as a multidisciplinary place to talk with each other about the texts, objects, images, performances, politics, films, and technologies that matter most to us. In keeping with ASAP’s emphasis on moving across, between, and flexibly within disciplines and national traditions, this year’s program committee has tried to put together a conference that speaks to the ways that we’ve been forced to think about everything that has and has not changed about the contemporary world over the past year.

The credit for this thinking goes to you and to the work you’re bringing to Oakland. The submissions for this year’s conference were numerous and intellectually impressive. We look forward to the conversations that will start here in Oakland and sustain us for future ASAP conferences and symposia.

In addition to ASAP/9’s keynote events with Edgar Arceneaux, Julia Bryan-Wilson, Kevin Jerome Everson, Michael B. Gillespie, and Rachel Kushner, the program committee also has put together a list of featured panels and roundtables that crystallized some of the topics and concerns we saw emerging with particular vibrancy. Some of these panels speak with great clarity on pressing aspects of the global political moment; others assess the history of the present and speculate on its potential legacies; others invite us to engage the present from new methodological and theoretical perspectives. All of them exemplify how ASAP, since its founding and first conference almost ten years ago, has tried to bring ideas about the arts together.

We wish to thank all of the institutions and people who have made ASAP/9 possible. We are deeply grateful to our hosts and sponsors for their support, and appreciate the generosity of the UC Berkeley community at a time when the public mission of the university remains at financial and political risk. Our Thursday keynote screening would not be happening without the energy and spirit of Michael B. Gillespie and film curator Kathy Geritz, who has been ingenious and supportive with her time, resources, and imagination. Our thanks to Philina Lim at the Oakland Marriott, and to Joemari Cedo and Jennifer Holland in Berkeley’s English department for providing wonderful logistical support. Jane Hu, ASAP/9’s graduate assistant, has kept things running smoothly behind the scenes, and has been instrumental in organizing all the other graduate student volunteers.
Monte Holman’s design work—online and in the program you’re reading now—has been timely and impeccable. And while the ASAP Motherboard operates with remarkable collectivity, the program committee would like to thank Gloria Fisk, Angela Naimou, and Lisa Uddin individually for crucial help along the way.

Yours,

Weihong Bao, Natalia Brizuela, Mark Goble, Yogita Goyal, Evan Kindley, Steven Lee, Katherine Snyder

Kevin Jerome Everson works in film, painting, sculpture, and photography. His filmic fables, the focus of this exhibition, articulate the profound within the ordinariness of everyday life. Everson, who was born in the working-class community of Mansfield, Ohio, depicts details in the lives of people living and working in similar American communities: a mechanic repairing an old car in a backyard, a black beauty queen in a segregated pageant, men boxing, snowplow operators in winter, young men walking into a courtroom, the aftermath of a murder. Some of Everson’s films are constructed from appropriated news and film footage, uncovering forgotten details of African-American life in the 1960s and 70s. In other films, the artist explores the waxing and waning of a community’s sense of itself and the migration of black people from the South to the North in order to find work. Everson, whose work was included in the 2008 Whitney Biennial, approaches race, sexuality, and economic circumstances with a poetic yet unflinching eye. Adopting the stance of an observer, his interest in labor has both a political and a formal aspect, exploring the relationship between the human body and the materiality of the labor it performs as both an expression of class and identity, and as a performative gesture.
Edgar Arceneaux was born in Los Angeles in 1972. He investigates historical patterns through drawings, installations, and multimedia events, such as the reenactment of Ben Vereen’s tragically misunderstood blackface performance at Ronald Reagan’s 1981 Inaugural Gala. In the artist’s work, linear logic is abandoned in favor of wordplay and visual associations, revealing how language, technology, and systems of ordering produce reality as much as describe them. Seemingly disparate elements—such as science fiction, civil rights era speeches, techno music, and the crumbling architecture of Detroit—find a new synchronicity in the artist’s hands, ultimately pointing to larger historical forces such as the rise of the surveillance state. Arceneaux’s installations have taken the form of labyrinths, libraries, multi-channel videos, and drawn landscapes that change over the course of an exhibition, only ever offering a partial view of the whole at any given moment. This fragmentation extends to the artist’s use of historical research in his work, such as FBI documents concerning civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr., where redacted passages are presented on mirrors that reflect the viewer’s curious gaze.

Michael B. Gillespie is a film theorist and historian with an interest in black visual and expressive culture, film theory, genre, visual historiography, global cinema, adaptation theory, popular music studies, and contemporary art. His recent book, Film Blackness: American Cinema and the Idea of Black Film (Duke University Press, 2016) frames black film alongside literature, music, art, photography, and new media, treating it as an interdisciplinary form that enacts black visual and expressive culture. The book shifts the ways we think about black film, treating it not as a category, genre, or strictly a representation of the black experience but as a visual negotiation between film as art and the discursivity of race.
Rachel Kushner is among America’s most exciting writers. Her novels and essays explore contemporary art, culture, revolutionary politics, modernism, and feminism with unmatched wisdom and grace.

She has twice been a finalist for the National Book Award and is a Guggenheim Fellow. Her fiction and essays appear regularly in the New York Times, The Paris Review, The Believer, Artforum, Bookforum, Fence, Bomb, and Grand Street.

Rachel’s first novel, Telex from Cuba, intertwines revolution in 1950’s Cuba and visceral human interactions with a revelatory, deft hand. In a starred review, Kirkus Reviews called it “Soundly researched and gorgeously written.” A New York Times bestseller and a finalist for both the National Book Award and the Dayton Literary Peace Prize, it was a winner of the California Book Award.

Her incendiary work, The Flamethrowers, was a finalist for The National Book Award and was named one of the Top Ten Books of the year by The New York Times. It is celebrated as a modern classic. Rachel’s work continues to garner acclaim among her contemporaries like few other authors in recent history. In their review The New York Times proclaimed, “…her prose has a poise and wariness and moral graininess that puts you in mind of weary-souled visionaries like Robert Stone and Joan Didion.”

Rachel Kushner in Conversation with Julia Bryan Wilson
Julia Bryan-Wilson teaches modern and contemporary art, with a focus on art since 1960 in the US, Europe, and Latin America; she is also the Director of the UC Berkeley Arts Research Center. Her research interests include theories of artistic labor, feminist and queer theory, performance, production/fabrication, craft histories, photography, video, visual culture of the nuclear age, and collaborative practices. She is the author of Art Workers: Radical Practice in the Vietnam War Era (University of California Press, 2009); Art in the Making: Artists and Their Materials from the Studio to Crowdsourcing (with Glenn Adamson, Thames & Hudson, 2016); and Fray: Art and Textile Politics (University of Chicago, 2017). With Andrea Andersson, she curated Cecilia Vicuña: About to Happen, which opened at the Contemporary Arts Center New Orleans in 2017 and will travel to the Berkeley Art Museum, the Henry Art Gallery, and the ICA in Philadelphia. She is currently writing a book about Louise Nevelson.

She was a recipient of a Creative Capital/Andy Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant, and has won several awards for her teaching. She was the Terra Foundation Visiting Professor of American Art at the Courtauld Institute of Art in Spring 2014, and from fall 2014 to spring 2015 she was a Townsend Center for the Humanities Associate Professor Fellow. In 2017 she was a Visiting Senior Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Visual Arts at the National Gallery in Washington, DC.

“Do You Have a Band?”
Poetry and Punk Rock in New York City
DANIEL KANE
“This book seamlessly blends historical analysis with literary critique, pop culture, and just the right amount of dirt.”
—Gillian McCain, coauthor of Please Kill Me: The Uncensored Oral History of Punk
978-0-231-16297-5 - pb - $30.00
978-0-231-54460-3 - eb - $29.99

Lasting Impressions
The Legacies of Impressionism in Contemporary Culture
JESSE MATZ
“Invaluable to anyone interested in the unstable divide between art and its co-optation, high culture and kitsch, real experience and artistic fraud.”
—Tamar Katz, author of Impressionist Subjects
978-0-231-16406-1 - cl - $60.00
978-0-231-54305-7 - eb - $59.99

Contemporary Drift
Genre, Historicism, and the Problem of the Present
THEODORE MARTIN
“This exceptional book makes the present crisis of critical theory both intelligible and fun.”
—Nancy Armstrong, Duke University
978-0-231-18192-1 - cl - $60.00
978-0-231-54389-7 - eb - $59.99

Minor Characters Have Their Day
Genre and the Contemporary Literary Marketplace
JEREMY ROSEN
“A compelling book. . . . a valuable component of a larger inquiry into scholarship on contemporary character, transmedia storytelling, and the world literary market.”
—Daniel Punday, ASAP/Journal
978-0-231-17744-3 - cl - $60.00
978-0-231-54240-1 - eb - $59.99

Unmaking Love
The Contemporary Novel and the Imp possibility of Union
ASHLEY T. SHELDEN
